Synopsis:

As you all know, because of the volcanic eruption in Iceland in April this year, most flight operations in the European airports had to be suspended for several days, causing chaos for tens of thousands of travellers.

Similarly, the Heathrow Airport in London had to be closed during the volcanic eruption for 5 consecutive days. During this period, the airport was crowded with thousands of stranded passengers waiting anxiously to get on their planes to their destinations. Yet, in the end, some passengers were grateful to this natural disaster, including our friend Steve.
